Justice Scandal Sidetracked?

By EDWIN ROTE Colonist London Correspondent

LONDON - Britain's fierce national election battle opens this week with the sensation al publication of High Court Judge Lord Denning's len g-expected report about the Pro-fumo scandal. Only Prime Minister Harold Macmillan decides on what day between now and October, 1864, the na-tional election will be held.

Beside Macmillan, very few people know whether he in-tends to hold it already in November, as has been much rumored recently. This would rob him of two political chances: a vote-catching bud-Nikita Khrushchev, But it would end the bitter fighting inside the Conservative party about who should be its leader in the election battle.

Although the Denning Report was given tremendous advance publicity, and its publication has been heraided as a momentous event, it is a completely irrelevant document and a gigantic diversion. Lord

Denning had no power for compelling witnesses to appear before him. Everyone whom heard talked voluntarily. No witness was on oath and nobody was cross-examined. Whoever deliberately lied to Lord Denning committed no

Immensely more significant than Lord Denning's irrelevant report is the fact that Macillan did not have the scandal investigated by a Select Committee of the House of Commons. This would have been the correct constitutional instrument for the investiga-tion. The Labor party and the

select committee hears evidence in private—but it can compel witnesses to attend. The witnesses are examined on eath. If they have jailed for perjury. eath. If they lie, they can be

An acquittal from such a select committee would have been far more valuable for Macmillan than any whitewash from Lord Denning-who had no powers at all. But Macmillan was afraid to risk a select committee. About the Denning inquiry, the Liberal party's leader Joseph Grimond himself a lawyer, said recently that it was something pre viously unknown to any judicial system.

Macmillan obviously hoped for a whitewashing operation. Lord Denning is a very strict moralist, and has in recent years often attacked public immorality. Because of that, an acquittal from Lord Denning is more useful for Macmillan's government than acquittal

Why and How?

WITH LESS THAN a week to go before election day, British Columbia voters are being assailed on every side by politicians anxiously telling them how to vote. Not so willingly, however, have the partisan forces given the public their reasons why it should vote as they advise.

With the exception of the New Democratic Party not one political organization has submitted for the consideration of the electorate of this province anything remotely approaching a comprehensive policy or program for the future administration of the af-faire of British Columbia.

True, the Conservative Party has put out a 10point program covering items ranging from the reor-canization of public debt to lowering municipal taxes by 10 per cent but so far it has failed to take the voter into its confidence by telling him how this will be ac-

Even the NDP (which has done better than most in this field) falls far short of providing a solid plat-form for the voter to view, preferring to reveal its policy plank by plank instead of producing it as a com-plete structure open for the inspection and judgment

The Liberal Party has failed to come up with anything of a positive nature, and the Social Credit Party has followed suit.

With regard to the latter, it may, of course, be considered that Premier Bennett's much vaunted Socred "manifesto" outlines that party's plans for the tainly nothing of how a Social Credit government and direct the province's development in the years

Is it too much to ask the politicians to tell us not only what their programs are but how they intend carrying them out before we go to the polis?

More Hopeful

WITH SOME reservations, the Soviet Union's propossi of an 18-nation conference on disarma-within the next nine months may be taken as a hopeful and encouraging sign. In the context of the long and fruitless Geneva talks, the new suggestion could be regarded as suspect, as probably only another manoeuvre deemed by the U.S.S.R. to be of propagands value. But the test-ban treaty puts Mr. Grogands value. myko's initiative in a new and more optimistic light.

The Russian willingness as expressed by the Soviet foreign minister to agree that both the United States and his own country should retain a limited number of intercontinental and defensive missiles with nuclear warheads until disarmament is otherwise complete seems sensible in more than one respect.

If all nuclar weapons were destroyed—or supposed to be—as a first or very early step and without exception, neither side would have a dependable safeguard against the other cheating or changing policy in respect to the remaining phases of disarming

But there will be another reason behind the pro-posal in view of the conflict of nationalism between Russia and China. This antagonism already has deprived Peking of the scientific and material aid that would have permitted her to achieve massive nuclear capability in the near future; the expectation is now that it will take a decade at least before Communist China is able realistically to threaten other nations with atomic doom.

Thus if Peking could not be brought into a world would at least for some years—and perhaps as long as they might thereafter agree—still have a limited nuclear deterrent to Chinese empire-building. Even so, however, the major powers must ask themselves if they can safely do away with their conventional weapons and their military forces unless and until China does the same. Reluctantly it may have to be recognized that it is yet too early to disarm if Chinese Communists continue to dream of building a new order, with themselves as leaders, on the ashes

A New Home

THE LOCAL labor movement has cause to pat itself on the back as its nine-year dream has culminated in a fine new headquarters building. It is no light task for any group to ensure the erection in modern times of a building suitable for its purpose

It is to be noted also that the new Union Centre on Quadra Street was financed by those in whose name it was built, no public appeal for aid being made, as is the case with most projects nowadays. This was an instance of bending themselves to the task which faced them.

The new labor centre, with its extensive facilities and an auditorium which will add to the amenities of the city in general, will enable trade union groups better to serve the interests of their members and thus the community of which they constitute an important and valuable section.

The congratulations voiced by Mayor Wilson during the opening ceremonies last week are certainly in

THE JAYCEES are concerned lest Santa in multiple form edges into the Christmas parade too early, and would like him to make an official and single entry into town on November 16, For some people even that will seem too soon, albeit the habit nowa-days is to bring him to the fore well in advance.

Already many a housewife has picked out the gifts she will bestow this coming Yuletide and many a calendar is having the days stroked off towards the culmination of December 25.

It is no use lamenting that traditionally Santa Claus came down the chimney quietly and in secret, for his modern counterpart thrives in the glare of publicity and expectation. As a matter of fact he would be hard put to outdo the political Santas prevalent on the hustings at the moment, who promise all sorts of goodies for everyone if only the right votes

It may be true that some folks are tired of duplicate Santas showing off their red robes, as the Jay-cees aver, and that when he finally departs in his sleigh, fairy-like or synthetic, they heave a sigh of relief. But if he never came at all they would feel

One suspects that Santa Claus knows this only too well, which is doubtless why he doesn't wait for the witching hour of the Christmas midnight but comes in the middle of the day long before his ap-

Wounded Lions Blow Gallant Effort Rider Punts Yield Two Touchdowns

in the second quarter when Riders tried an onside play, lining speedy Whit Tucker up behind punter Rick Black, a rookie from New Brunswick.

Black did his part by lofting a high kick which travelled ahead only about 20 yards. Tucker timed it perfectly to catch the hall and get to the R.C. 19-yard line.

Fullback Dave Thelen, who accred all three Ottawa touchdowns, took it from there in two plunges to make the score

Then in the fourth quarter, after the Lions had fought back into a 17-15 lead, Black rushed up to recover his own punt as rookie Steve Shafer let it bounce around. Black fell on the ball on the B.C. 47-yard line. Seven plays later, Thelen drove over from

Every 1964 Rambler will go through a Tunnel of Love

(and come out with the world's best rustproofing)

Are we getting romantic? In a way. It's the romance of engineering. It's the continual search at the Rambler plant to find ways of improving our cars.

For years now we've had the most complete rustproofing process in the world. But we couldn't let it go at that. Why? Because we knew there were ways we could make it even better.

In the past we dipped our cars into six separate tanks of rust-proofing solutions. These cleansed and scoured the surface of the metal and covered it with rust resistant materials, the most complete protection in the industry. But we weren t quite satisfied. So we developed our new tunnel.

Into it goes each car. Hundreds of spray jets hammer all surfaces of the body, inside and out. They clean, scour and apply rustproofing with incredible precision. All of the metal gets the optimum amount of rustproofing material—250 milligrams per square foot. On its way through, the car dips into each of six tanks to add extra protection to all surfaces. Then out it comes, perfectly ready for the primer

That's the sort of loving care every Rambler gets. The result of our fond attention is maximum usefulness to you, the user. Make a date now to meet a new 1964 Rambler at your dealer's on October the 3rd.

AGENDA FOR PROGRESS for the greatest seven years of your Province's history

Unifed Fails to Handle

TO THE PEOPLE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA:

Eleven years ago, you assigned to me the great honor, and the great responsibility, of leading a new Government of British Columbia. You did so at a very troubled time in the political history of our Province, a time when the Liberal government of the day, first in coalition with the Conservative Party and then on its own, had proved to the limits of your endurance that its policies were simply not in the best interests of the people of British Columbia.

It was a time of soaring public debt which actually exceeded the value of all fixed assets of the Province; a time of horse-and-buggy highways, inadequate hospital services and educational facilities; a time when the sinking funds of the Province – the funds which must be provided to guarantee our ability to meet our obligations – had been drained by literally millions of dollars. And it was a time of waste, extravagance, and patronage, when hundreds of Orders-in-Council (the public record of a government's actions and decisions) were secretly passed and systematically withheld from public view. This is worth recalling now when these same parties are counting on your short memory by talking of integrity in government.

Then as now, the CCF Party was the official opposition, and even then you made it plain that you rejected the reckless promises of the CCF as a solution to the needs of the Province. You made it plain that you wanted a government neither of the reactionary right nor of the radical left, a government non-partisan in nature and representative only of a complete cross-section of the people.

With your confidence and support during the years since 1952, the Social Credit Government team has brought order and stability to the public affairs of this Province. You have made possible the finest highway system in Canada, the expansion of higher education from one university to four, the construction of dozens of new schools, the provision of vocational and technical schools and the institution of a province-wide plan for the construction of junior colleges. You have endorsed the payment by this Government of Canada's most generous Old Age Pension and Social Assistance allowances, and you have seen confidence in our competitive free enterprise system grow so markedly that this year, more outside investment per capita has been made in British Columbia than in any other province.

With these accomplishments as a solid base, we are now in a position to proceed with a detailed plan for the most decisive period in British Columbia's history: the remaining seven years of the 1960s. I. say "decisive" because I am convinced that now as never before, continued careful planning and continued dynamic policies will allow us to expand employment opportunities, enrich the material and cultural life of every citizen, and bring our Province to the highest state of development that a bountiful Nature affords.

For the past several months, the members of your Government have studied closely the developing needs of every sector of the economy. As a result of that study, we have established firm targets for the next seven years; co-ordinated in a single Timetable for Progress, they form the Social Credit Government's manifesto for the 1960s. I urge you to study this Timetable closely, to relate it to your own targets for the next seven years, and to acquaint yourself with the detailed program for every department of government which your Social Credit team is outlining during the current election campaign. The Timetable targets are challenging, but they are realistic; and to those who might label them as fantastic, I can only reply that 11 years ago, many of the programs of this Government which have long since been carried out were also branded as fantastic.

On this forward-looking program, then, the Social Credit team asks your support in the September 30 general election. We do so in the same non-partisan spirit which has been endorsed in past elections by men and women of all political leanings, regardless of their federal party preference. We are grateful for that confidence, and in seeking your renewed mandate, I give you my personal pledge that all our policies in the decisive years ahead will be directed solely to the betterment of this great Province which all of us love so much.

Yours sincerely,

MA.C.A.

Mr. MACFARLANE STOP KIDDING!

As MLA for Oak Bay for the past three years, anything-for Oak Bay. It's not your fault entirely, Mr. Macfarlane, for you are a fine person ... a well respected lawyer. It's just that you represent a small, ineffective minority party, whose sole aim seems to be to embitter and antagonize the government.

In this regard you are not blameless. The fact that you voted consistently with the N.D.P. party . . . that you tried to kill the Home Owner grant . . . and your general behaviour on the floor of the House has prejudiced your position with the government. It has made you totally ineffective for Oak Bay.

We may be putting it a little strongly, Mr. Mac-fariane, but you'll have to agree that to get things done for Oak Bay you must make friends not enemies, especially since you are a member of a small, ineffective minority party and are on the wrong side of the government.

Conversation Blooms

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRUS

If you are one of those off-beat characters who likes to grow flowers not ordinarily found in the average gardens, I suggest you make a spe-cial study of the back pages of the bulb catalogues. In addition to the usual run of tulips, daffs and crocuses, you'll find a few not-so-com-mon bulbs which can be planted this fall for blooming next spring or summer. Most of these are easy to grow and quite inexpensive to buy.

Allium moly, sometimes called Golden Garlic or Leek Lily, is an ornamental cousin to our common garden onion. Producing umbers of showy yellow flowers on 12-inch stems, Allium is certainly worthy of a place in anybody's perennial border, and is equally at home naturalized in grash like daffs and crocuses. October is the best month for planting, and the bulbs can be purchased for around 40 cents per dozen or $2.75 per hundred.

Another pretty bulb flower which serves more extensive planting is Babians, a South African flower bearing some resemblance to the Freezia. Blooming in April and May, it bears compact spikes of flowers ranging in color from blue to yellow to rose and crimson. Babiana makes a pl standing about nine inches tall, neater and much less floppy than the Freezia, and an excellent subject either for the front of the mixed border or for a pocket in the rock garden. The bulbs run about 30 cents

Fritiliaria maleagris, the Snake's Head Fritiliary, isn't everybody's cup of iea, as the flowers appear macabre and simister to some folks. I rather like the thing and find it a real conversation piece, useful too in the shadier parts of the garden where the bulbs are planted four inches deep in peaty soil.

Because of its checkered mark-cause of its checkered mark ings, the plant is sometimes called the Checkerd Lily or Guinoa Han Flower. The true name, Fritiliaria, is Latin for "dice box" and I presume it was so named by some ancient Roman crapshooter. I have the purple variety, mottled with pinkish markings, and the variety Alba, with dainty drooping white bells. The bulbs run from 50 to 85 cents per dozen, depending on variety. ings, the plant is sometimes called Ixia, the African Corn Lily, is a most graceful subject, although not too reliable in a cold, wet spring. The thin stems are about 18 inches tall, bearing a prefusion of brilliantly-colored blooms in a multitude of shades, all with dark centres. Plant the bulbs three inches deep and five inches apart, preferably in October. Ixia likes a rather sandy soil in a sunny position and with a bit of shelter from cold winds.

The Corn Lily is a good subject for potting up to bloom indoors too. Fill the pots with the same light, sandy soil plus a little peat moss, and stand in an unheated frame or sunporch until early spring, when they can be brought indoors and flowered in a sunny but cool window. The bulbs run about 35 cents per dosen or $2.50 per hundred.

flower and a great favorite with my wife is Sparaxis, known as the Wand Flower for its thin, wiry stems, and as the Hariequin Flower for its radiant enloring. The bulbs are usually sold in mixed colors, and such a mixed bag will produce color combinations rarely seen in any other flower. Most of our bulbs were bought as unnamed mixtures, but we have just one named variety, Fire King. with flaming scarlet flowers King, with flaming scarlet flowers and a black centre with a yellow ring.

Sparaxis likes about the same additions as the Ixia—well drained gritty soil, a sunny location, and some protection from the wind. The bulbs are planted three inches deep and six inches apert, and cost about 50 cents per dozen or $3.50 per hun-

bad. What they have in common is the strange notion that their personal habits and standards where coffee is concerned are fascinating for the rest of us. It may sound like a reckless thing to say, but a coffee snob talking about his coffee is more boring than a pipe-smoker talki about his pipes-or even a wine expert indulging in his dreary winesmanship.

The lower orders of cofee snobs make a great issue of taking their coffee black, or perhaps with six drops of cream but never They deliver superior little lectures on the advantages of the drip pot over the percolator. They become faint and have to down at the mention of instant coffee.

Some coffee snobs concentrate on volume. They spend their waking hours in drinking coffee, and telling everyone how much coffee they drink.

Higher orders of coffee snobs prattle on endlessly about mixtures and grinds, brew their coffee in dangerous-looking contrivances, and evaluate restaurants and civilizations according to their attitude toward chicory and how often they wash the pot.

As one who likes coffee-almost any coffee, almost any time-we have long resented the way coffee snobs used a good, straightforward beverage as the object of a mystic cult full of experts and self-congratulation. In desperation, we began telling coffee snobs about our Uncle Harold, and immediately our life in this world became easier. He was the ultimate coffee snob.

Boside Macmillan, very few people know whether he inNovember, as has been much rumored recently. This would rob him of two political chances: a vote-catching budget in April, and a visit from Nikita Khrushchev. But it would end the bitter fighting inside the Conservative party about who should be its leader in the election bittle.

Although the Denning Report was given tremendous advance publicity, and its publication has been heralded as a manuentous event, it is a completely irrelevant docum and a gigantic diversion. Lord

Justice Scandal Sidetracked?

Immensely more significant than Lord Denning's irrelevant report is the fact that Macmillan did not have the scandal investigated by a Select Committee of the House of Commons. This would have been the correct constitutional instrument for the investigaLiberal party officially de-manded a select committee, which always contains parlia-mentarians of all parties among them experienced lawyers

select committee hears evidence in private-but it can compel witnesses to attend. The witnesses are examined on eath. If they lie, they can be jailed for perjury.

An acquittal from such a nelect committee would have been far more valuable for Macmillan than any whitewash from Lord Denning-who had no powers at all. But Macmillan was afraid to risk a select committee. About the Denning inquiry, the Liberal party's leader Joseph Grimond, himself a lawyer, said recently that it was something previously unknown to any judicial system.

Macmillan obviously hoped for a whitewashing operation. Lord Denning is a very strict moralist, and has in recent years often attacked public immorality. Because of that, an acquittal from Lord Denning is more useful for Macmillan' government than acquittal

Mr. MACFARLANE STOP KIDDING!

As MLA for Oak Bay for the past three years, you have done nothing - nor can you ever do anything—for Oak Bay. It's not your fault entirely, Mr. Macfarlane, for you are a fine person . . . a well respected lawyer. It's just that you represent a small, ineffective minority party, whose sole aim seems to be to embitter and antagonize the government.

In this regard you are not blameless. The fact that you voted consistently with the N.D.P. party . . . that you tried to kill the Home Owner grant . . . and your general behaviour on the floor of the House has prejudiced your position with the government. It has made you totally ineffective for Oak Bay.

We may be putting it a little strongly, Mr. Macfarlane, but you'll have to agree that to get things done for Oak Bay you must make friends, wrong side of the government.

NEW YORK (AP) - Traffic Commissioner Henry Barnes drew the line Monday - the sentre line on Fifth Avenue.

Justice Scandal Sidetracked?

By EDWIN BOTH Colonist London Correspondent

LONDON - Britain's fierce national election battle opens this week with the sensational publication of High Court Judge Lord Denning's longexpected report about the Pro-fumo scandal. Only Prime Minister Harold Macmillan decides on what day between now and October, 1964, the na-tional election will be held.

* * * Beside Macmillan, very few people know whether he in-tends to hold it already in November, as has been much rumored recently. This would rob him of two political chances: a vote-catching bud-get in April, and a visit from Niltita Khrushchev. But it would end the bitter fighting inside the Conservative party about who should be its leader in the election battle.

Although the Denning Report was given tremendous advance publicity, and its publi-cation has been heralded as a momentous event, it is a completely irrelevant document and a gigantic diversion. Lord Denning had no power for compelling witnesses to appear before him. Everyone whom he heard talked voluntarily No witness was on oath and nobody was cross-examined. Whoever deliberately lied to Lord Denning committed no

Immensely more significant than Lord Denning's irrelevant report is the fact that Mac-millan did not have the scandal investigated by a Select Committee of the House of Commons. This would have been the correct constitutional instrument for the investiga-tion. The Labor party and the Liberal party officially de-manded a select committee, which always contains parliamentarians among them experienced law yers.

A select committee hears evidence in private-but, it can compel witnesses to attend. The witnesses are examined on onth. If they lie, they can be jailed for perjury.

An acquittal from such a select committee would have been far more valuable for Macmillan than any whitewash from Lord Denning-who had no powers at all. But Mac millan was afraid to risk a select committee. About the Denning inquiry, the Liberal party's leader Joseph Grimond, himself a lawyer, said recently that it was something previously unknown to any judicial system.

Macmillan obviously hoped for a whitewashing operation. Lord Denning is a very strict moralist," and has in recent years often attacked public immorality. Because of that, an acquittal from Lord Denning is more useful for Macmilian's government than acquittal
